. . . a song, a happy moment of your life, a sad song, or a thing you hate. . . . It might be a fast motion, a slow motion, it doesn't matter what, just put it in there. [Patrick Hogan] Founder & CEO, Coub 00:22:00 [James] Thanks for listening to another episode of the Racket Talk podcast. I'm James Fisher. We're now joined by two guests. First, I'd like to welcome Patrick Hogan who is the founder and CEO of Coub. Thanks for having me, James. I'm a big fan of your product. Thanks. And also, I'd like to welcome Peter Alvarado. He's the CTO of Coub. [Peter Alvarado] Yeah. Thanks for having me. So, you've made it this far in the interview. I'm very pleased. Yeah. Yeah. Thanks. The problem is, it's really hard to hear. Okay. [Laughs] It's hard to hear and see at the same time. So, I'm excited to get this out to the world, because my feeling is people really love this and they really love this tool and they really love the concept of personalizing their loops. Tell us a little bit about your background. I'm the CTO of Coub. I was a software developer, I worked for a venture firm, brought in my background of software development and

I started Coub just about a year ago. Yeah. So, I'm a writer. I grew up in Vancouver. I went to Boston to study computer science and I worked at a firm for a few years and then in 2010 I moved to San Francisco and I started my career as a writer. So, I've written for Gawker and Wired and 82157476af
